

A busy day at the stable.

This story includes words starting with /st/.

A busy day at the stable.

The horse was going to have a very busy day. He was going to perform in a show that night. "I can't wait to be on the stage," he thought to himself.

The horse had lots of things to do before the show. First, he needed to post a letter so he put a stamp on the envelope then went to post the letter. It was a red stamp and his favourite colour was red.

Next, he needed to read a story to his friend. His friend was standing next to his stable when he read the story. She really enjoyed the story and said that she'd come back tomorrow for another story.

Suddenly, there was a big storm and lots of sticks were falling from the trees. "Oh no, I'm going to get soaked in this storm when I go to the theatre," thought the horse.

Soon, it was time for the horse to go to the show. “I can’t wait to perform on the stage, I’m going to be the star of the show,” he thought to himself.

The horse got soaked on the way to the theatre because it was still stormy outside.

The horse walked up the stairs to the theatre and stood on a bee. “Argh!!! The bee has stung my foot!” shouted the horse.

The horse wasn't going to let a little sting stop him from being the star of the show.

The horse did the best performance that he had ever done on the stage and really was the star of the show!

“I can’t wait for the next show,” he thought to himself on the way back to his stable. He looked into the night sky and saw lots of stars.

When he got back to his stable, he went to bed. "I wonder what the next show will be," he thought to himself. Then, he fell straight to sleep.

The end.