

The thin man and the thunder.

This story includes words starting with
/th/.

The thin man and the thunder.

The thin man woke up and felt a bit worried. He had heard that there was going to be a thunder storm that day and he didn't like thunder.

It was a Thursday and he usually went out on his bike on a Thursday. The thin man had decided not to ride his bike on this particular Thursday because he was too scared of the thunder.

*  Thursday

“I’ll find something else to do today,” he thought. So, he looked in the newspaper and realised that there was a talent show happening at the theatre later that day. “That’s exciting, I could sing a song!” thought the thin man.

The thin man spent all morning practicing his song. He practiced it thirty times! Then, he went to the theatre.

He ran really fast to the theatre, through all of the rain and the thunder. The thin man was very brave. When he got to the theatre, he was proud of himself for going out in the thunder. “Maybe the thunder isn’t so scary,” he thought to himself.

The thin man did really well and won third place in the theatre competition.

He also won a prize for being in third place. “Thanks!” he said, when he received his prize.

Once the theatre show had finished, it was quite late so the thin man went home. When he got home, he was so thirsty because all of the singing that he had done.

He also felt very hot from running back home through the thunder. He checked the thermometer in his room and it was very hot! “I think I’ll open a window,” he thought.

Then, the thin man went to bed. “I’ve had a wonderful day today. I came third place in the competition and I don’t think that I’m scared of thunder anymore!” and with those lovely thoughts, he fell straight to sleep.

The end.